ALEX PHILLIPS,

THE BRITISH COLONIST.
Sunday Morning, July 30, 1871.

Party vs Principle.

The factionist is out again in one of his characteristic articles on the necessity for party organization. The electors are exhorted to return none but out-and-out 'party men,' men prepared to subordinate everything to party. Like the old man who gave this parting admonition to his son, 'John, make money, honestly if you can; but make money.' So this political desperado urges the electors to adopt as their motto, 'Support your party, from principle if you can; but support your party.' We are told that when the Lowlanders rushed into battle with the cry, 'God defend the Right!' the Highlanders pulled their bonnets over their brows and shouted, 'God defend the Macgregors whether they be right or wrong!' Without any desire to question the importance of party organization, provided principle be the basis of party, we feel that we cannot too strongly deprecate the attempt which is being made to inculcate an erroneous and dangerous notion respecting true party government. This colony has just emerged out of Colonial office serfdom, and its people are called upon to construct a government to their own liking. And this is the work which the electors are urged to approach in the spirit of party—of faction! Surely if ever any work demanded a patriotic and united effort it is this. It occurs to us to ask this factionist upon what basis parties are to be formed. The people are of one way of thinking upon all the great political questions of the day, and yet they are urged to divide off into hostile parties or rather factions, before ever the new government has been formed. It appears to us that no greater calamity could befall this people than the adoption of such a suicidal policy. The colony would only have escaped the Scylla of Despotism to be wrecked on the Charybdis of Faction. In the article alluded to it is asked of the electors, 'Are they prepared to return members who will give a liberal and generous support to the government or not?' And then it is added, 'If they are not prepared to return party men, they are not prepared for party government; and without party men there can be no Responsible Government.' The question appears to us to be premature, and the conclusion wholly unwarranted. How in the name of common sense can the electors say whether they are prepared or not to return members who will give liberal and generous support to a government yet in the womb of futurity? It appears to us that thoughtful men would wish to see the government and its policy before committing themselves to any party formed either to support or oppose it. As we have said the whole body of the people, differing on no important political question, are now called upon to create a new government. It is to be presumed that they will be enabled upon principle to support a government of their own making; but in any case they cannot join a party to oppose it until proved unworthy of their confidence and support. What would appear to be the true course for the people to pursue, under the exceptional circumstances, is this: Return the best available men to the local Legislature; and if the government formed out of the material thus supplied by the people should propound a policy calculated to promote the best interests of the country, why, of course, support that government. If otherwise, oppose it. But to ask a people holding one political creed to divide off into hostile political factions before ever a government has been formed, much less a government policy enunciated, is sheer nonsense; it is worse than nonsense, it is absolutely wicked. Abstractly considered as a literary production, the article which has been the immediate occasion of the present observations is, indeed, a curiosity. It reads very much like the spasmodic and incoherent exclamations of an expiring politician whose ruling passion is strong in death, 'Party, party, party, p-a-r-t-y!'

SUMMER GOODS.—A B Gray has received per steamer Pacific a large assortment of goods suitable for the present season, comprising Muslins, Prints, Hollands, Brilliantes, Alpaca, Lace, Barege and Wool Shawls, Silk, Cloth and Holland Jackets, Flowers, Silk and Cambric Sunshades, Linens, Cottons, Hosiery, Ribbons, Laces, &c., &c.—Government Street, May, 1871.

A. GILMORE, MERCHANT TAILOR, and General Outfitter, has removed his place of business to the store adjoining the Colonial Hotel and opposite the Colonial Office, on Government street, fourth door from Yates, where he proposes to give his old friends and new customers a chance on the principle of 'quick and small profits.'

35 YEARS OF SUCCESS?

C FRANCIS BARNARD, M. D.
SURGEON DENTIST.

DR. BARNARD WILL HAVE pursued his vocation of Dentistry in Victoria for Five Years next August, and humbly trusts to have acquired a portion of the public patronage for the coming decade.

We cheerfully add Dr. B's Card to our columns, convinced that his good taste and judgment, united to natural skill and industry, increased by an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, render his services more valuable and reliable than those of any other Dentist on the Sound, Coast or Island.

Dr. B's large experience may be readily seen in the happy and natural expression given his patients by his life-like insertion of full sets, or the partial remedying of nature's loss and deficiencies.

Patience and gentleness are the governing principle of the Doctor's office.

See his case of Impacted Work in Mr Roberts' window first store north of London House.

The San Juan Lime Kiln, owing to the Death of one of the Proprietors, MUST BE SOLD.
THIS KILN, BUILT IN 1870, AT A COST of $2700, is the best on the coast and is capable of burning 60 barrels a day. The San Juan lime has gained the reputation of being
THE BEST ON THE COAST.
There are 320 acres of land furnishing an inexhaustible supply of limestone and firewood. The land is situated on the east side of the island and has a
WATER FRONTAGE OF ONE MILE.
The Kiln is built on the beach above high water mark and the stone is 400 ft from the ledge into the Kiln. No hauling of stone or lime is required. There is also in connection with the Lime Kiln
One large commodious two-story Dwelling House furnished, one Blacksmith Shop, with complete set of tools, one Cooper Shop with complete set of tools, three log Dwellings Houses 1220 barrels, 60 cords of wood, one two-horse Wagon—new—and 3 wheelbarrows, and all the tools and implements necessary to carry on the business.

Everything is so complete that time can be drawn from the kiln three days from the time work is commenced. The location of the Terminus of the Northern Pacific R.R.
In July next and the consequent building of a large city on the Sound must create such a demand for lime as will make this the most profitable property on the coast.

NEWS! NEWS!

The "British Colonist" is the only newspaper published at Victoria that receives the Latest Telegraphic Dispatches, as a comparison will prove. Late Telegrams appearing in any other paper are copied without credit 24 hours after they have appeared in the British Colonist. The circulation of the British Colonist being double that of any other paper published in British Columbia, it offers the best medium to Advertisers.

Cariboo Summary.

The Twentieth was celebrated at Barkerville. Mr R. A. Brown who has received a Government appointment has gone to Omineca. The Lane & Kutz machinery was arriving. The smaller engine had been put up and set in motion. The telegraph was finished through to Barkerville and in good working order.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

The Forest Rose (William Creek) worked half time and washed up 103 oz. The Black Bull washed 93 oz. On Lowhee the Black Bull Co washed up 93 oz. They have got 12 or 13 feet of pay dirt and the claim promises to be one of the best in Cariboo. The Victoria Co washed up 40 oz. On Light-ning Creek the South Wales Co washed up 304 ozs, the Spruce Co 37 oz. On most of creeks a large amount of work was being done, and it was expected that a great deal of gold would shortly be taken out.

THE "INTERMEDIATE CHANNEL."—In Hon Dr Helmcken's great speech on the San Juan question in the Legislative Council last spring, he proposed a settlement of the matter in dispute by the adoption of an intermediate channel as the boundary, which would give to the British San Juan Island and to the United States the group of islands lying immediately south of that island. Copies of that speech—which was the best delivered on the subject—were laid before the Joint Commission by Hon Mr Trutch, when at Washington in April last; and it would now appear by the speech of the Earl of Carnarvon in the House of Lords in opposition to the Washington Treaty, that the proposition of Dr Helmcken was adopted by the British Commissioners, who, however, declined to settle the dispute on that basis, preferring to refer the matter to the Emperor of Germany for decision whether the line should run through the centre of Canal de Haro or Rosario Strait.

JEAL'S CIRCUS.—The Grand Matinee of Jeal Circus Company was in every respect a success. The riding and gymnastic feats of the Misses Jeal are truly wonderful. Miss Lucy flies through the air like a bird—through hoops and rings and over banners and poles—with a lightness, rapidity and precision that overwhelms beholders with astonishment, and Miss Linda walks the slack wire as it was never walked before by man or woman—turning, twisting and gyrating with as much ease as if it were nothing were her natural avocation. There is nothing prettier or more graceful than the acting of these young ladies. Uncle Dave Long, the clown, is a character and he is worthily backed by Nelson and others. The performing dogs are wonderful specimens of canine sagacity, and the monkeys are the perfection of wisdom and good nature. Several of the trick horses appear endowed with almost human sagacity. Last evening there was another performance to a crowded tent, and to-morrow night, after the performance, the tent will be struck and the troupe will bid farewell.

THE LATE BISHOP DEMERS.—The remains of the late Bishop Demers lay in state yesterday at the Cathedral. The body rests upon a catafalque surrounded by wax candles which burn night and day. Deceased is arrayed in the full canonicals of his sacred office. The face though pallid is very natural and bears the same calm expression that characterized it in life. Prayers were said at intervals yesterday for the repose of the dead, and large numbers visited the Cathedral during the day to view the remains. The remains will remain in state at the Cathedral until to-morrow at 9 o'clock when the last sad rites will be performed and the body interred in the chancel of the Cathedral.

NEW WESTMINSTER.—The Semiamoo trade is becoming important to New Westminster. The country over there is settling up rapidly and the people are most anxious that a trail should be made. A petition for the trail is in course of signature. The examination of Mrs Moresby's school took place on Thursday, and the prizes were given out by Mr Bushby. It is rumored that Mr Holbrook will be a candidate for the representation of New Westminster district in the House of Commons.

'A CHAPTER OF FUTURE HISTORY.'—The article headed 'The Second Armada,' from the London Times, will be read, we think, with interest. It is intended as an answer to the alarmist article in Blackwood of 'The Battle of Dorking,' and certainly places future events in a much more probable light than the article in Blackwood. The description of the fight on the Suffolk shore is quite thrilling and is told so well as to seem to almost possess the stamp of reality.

FOR PORTLAND.—The steamer G S Wright sailed for Portland via Port Townsend yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. She carried away about a dozen passengers, among whom was Mr R. C. Ames, a gentleman who has made himself quite popular in this town in connection with the skating rink so successfully established and which will be conducted in future upon the basis laid down by him.

Mrs LAMOND's entertainment was honored last night with the presence of Rear Admirals Winslow and Farquhar and Staffs, and a large audience. The coin prizes—$35 in value—and a number of other articles were distributed as per announcement. A benefit for the Royal Hospital some evening next week is suggested.

THE SKATING RINK, notwithstanding counter attractions, is more largely patronized than ever and the present hall being found too small to accommodate the increasing patron the proprietors have in prospect a larger rink.

GOING BACK.—Jas O'Neil, who has been entertained for the last week at Mr Pemberton's fine lodging house in consideration of his having voluntarily relieved Mr Solomon of the proprietorship of a pair of pants, was yesterday in consequence of a strong desire on the part of James to return to the land of liberty and his dislike to Confederation, and in order to facilitate his wish to leave the Province—released and ordered to appear on Tuesday for sentence.

M V B GARDINER, Esq. Traveling Agent for the Short Line Railway via Rock Island, and for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, is in Victoria on business connected with those lines. Having traveled over the roads named we can bear testimony to the speed, comfort and safety which characterize them. Passengers from British Columbia, bound East, should purchase their tickets of A L Wait, General Agent for the Pacific States, whose office is at 208 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

FROM THE MAINLAND.—The steamer Enterprise arrived from New Westminster at 4 1/2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, bringing Barnard's Cariboo Express with $40,000 in treasure and the following passengers: Mrs Dickinson, Mrs Sweeney, Bishop D'Hermoz, Rev Mr Darrick, Messrs John Treble, J H Turner, F Elford, G C Gerow, F Crelley, D McKeith, Pierce, Ross, M Nilson, Greenbaum, and fifteen others.

ARRIVAL.—The British iron ship Kenilworth, Capt Baikie, 20 days from San Francisco, arrived yesterday morning in Royal Roads. She is bound for the Hastings Mills to load lumber for Iquique, Peru. The Captain reports thick weather with variable winds. She will be towed to the Inlet to-day.

UNITARIAN CHRISTIANITY.—The subject of Rev Mr Kimball's discourse this morning will be, What religion is from the Unitarian point of view; in the evening, Some of the Special Doctrines of Unitarianism. The services will commence at 11 a m and 7 p m.

BURRARD INLET.—The Emma Augusta and Cornelia were loading at Hastings Mill and had nearly completed their cargoes. The Robert Jones was also loading at Moody's Mill and it was expected she would be ready for sea in about another week.

REV MR DERRICK of the Wesleyan Mission arrived last evening from Cariboo. Mr Derrick will be succeeded at Barkerville by Rev Mr Hall, and will be stationed at Nanaimo for the ensuing two years.

DEATH AT NANAIMO.—Mrs Reid, the beloved wife of Mr James Reid, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Nanaimo, died on Sunday last, after a protracted illness which she bore with great resignation.

The elegant steampacket Leviathan, Capt Baker, will leave Brockie's wharf at 1 o'clock this afternoon for an excursion to the outer harbor and the flag-ships, returning at or about 5 o'clock.

AMONG the arrivals from the Mainland yesterday was Mr Joe Trutch, who, it is supposed, will proceed at once to organize a coast railway surveying party.

BISHOP D'HESBOMME arrived from New Westminster last evening to officiate at the burial service over the remains of the late Bishop Demers.

THE CARCASS of a dead horse perfumes the air at Beacon Hill and renders a ramble through the pleasant groves delightful. Government or Corporation to blame—which?

THE CAROLINA.—The trial of the liability of this vessel to confiscation for violation of the Liquor Law was yesterday postponed until Monday next.

THE SARANAC will sail for San Juan Island, Astoria, and, possibly, Portland, about Thursday next.

INVALID.—Mr M Nelson of Bridge Creek came down by the Enterprise yesterday an invalid from rheumatism.

THE PRINCE ALBERT having sailed from San Francisco on Wednesday is due here to-day.

THE schooner Ocean Pearl will sail to-day for Bellingham Bay to load with coal for San Francisco.

THE BACKLASH'S PICNIC has been postponed till after the return of H M S Sparrowhawk.

THE St Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School will have a picnic on the 4th prox.

THE NAVAL RACK, unofficially announced the other day, will not take place.

THE ship Otago went through Plummer Pass going to the Inlet on Thursday.

THE GUNBOAT BOXER was inspected yesterday by Rear Admiral Farquhar.

Eastern States.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—The Brooklyn Union says it has the highest authority for saying that prominent members of the Tammany Ring called upon the principal proprietors of the New York Times a week or two since and made a startling offer for the copyright of that paper. They were told there was not sufficient money in New York to buy the Times. A day or two afterwards Tammany openly called upon the same man and offered one million dollars for part of the right if the Times would keep silence concerning the frauds it is now unearthing.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Prince Scherida, of Japan with twenty companions, chiefly from among the nobility of that country, arrived in this city to-day. The party will soon be divided among several prominent American institutions at which they propose to spend some time in study.

HARTFORD, July 28.—In the Senate to-day a bill to allow the purchasers of railways to take and operate the same—supposed to endanger the interests of the Massachusetts, Boston and Erie railway—was rejected in concurrence with the house.

Europe.

PARIS, July 28.—It is rumored that the reported adjournment of the Court Martial for the trial of the Communist prisoners is for the purpose of paving the way to an amnesty.

The Assembly has postponed until the 4th of August the question of distributing among all the Departments of France the lots of property and material occasioned by the German invasion.

LONDON July 28.—A dispatch from Paris says it is reported that Thiers has persuaded his colleagues to the Government to remain in office.

ROME, July 27.—Gecomalite, Archbishop of Aleppo, and 13 Hungarian Archbishops have forwarded to Rome their submission to the Dogma of Infallibility.

MADRID, July 28.—The King is about to make a visit to Leogici.

The Government has resolved to reduce salaries 20 per cent.

PARIS, July 28.—It is said that President Thiers has induced Bismarck to consent to the evacuation of the Paris forts still held by the German troops and the entire Departments of the Seine and Seine-et-Oise on or before the 31st of August.

Many Communist prisoners have been released.

It is rumored that Cardinal Antonelli has summoned Bishop Dupuolup to Rome.

The Court Martial has adjourned.

Cholera, typhus, plague and famine are still raging in Persia, and cannibalism is committed. The Government of Shiraz has placed a guard at the cemetery to prevent the authorities from disinterring the dead. The British Embassy and telegraphists say previous accounts were not exaggerated.

The Second Armada.

(A CHAPTER OF FUTURE HISTORY.)

"The sunset of life gives me mystic lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before."

Shortly after the close of the war between France and Germany in 1871, the English alarmists seemed unreasonable to an extent that verged on foolishness. Never was there a period when, to all outward seeming, an invasion of England was less feasible, France was stricken down and disabled. We had amicably arranged our differences with the United States, and the greatest military nation on the Continent had apparently neither the disposition nor the power to become a formidable assailant of our independence. It ever there was a country whose interests and constitution pointed to a pacific policy it was United Germany. She required peace to consolidate her empire, and she could not make war without calling the mercantile man from his desk, the professional or literary man from his study, the shopkeeper from his counter, and the agriculturist from the plough. Then, all-powerful on land, she was powerless on the seas.

So thought and argued the wise men of England in 1871. They thought and argued well, but wise men, however well they argue, will sometimes turn out wrong, and they turned out substantially wrong in this instance—as wrong as late the lamented Cobden when he made the tour of Europe to announce that, for all time to come, Free Trade had rendered a war a moral impossibility. Unluckily mankind are more swayed by their passions, their prejudices, their caprices, and their vanity than by their well-understood interests; and so it fell out that, in the year 1874, the greatest of the continental Powers, having taken umbrage at the tone and attitude of England in reference to sundry fresh parcellings out of territory, a League, including the most powerful States, was formed for the avowed purpose of reducing the British Isles to the condition of conquered provinces to be divided among the conquerors. The best mode of invading England had been so often the subject of competitive examination at the military schools that an eager desire to test theory by practice was felt by a very young officer of promise, and a saying of the greatest of modern strategists had got abroad to the effect that the capture of London, as compared with that of Paris, would be child's play (Kunderspiel). The time was opportune; for the long smouldering hostility of the United States to Great Britain, through a series of untoward accidents, was again kindling into flame. Accordingly all the shipping of the Baltic, all the naval resources of the League, were put under requisition, and a sufficient number of vessels was built especially adapted for the landing of troops, including cavalry and artillery. In particular, a large provision was made of flat-bottomed boats carrying 100 or 150 men, the sides of which could be let down when they were in shallow water, or had been run on shore. A formidable force of ironclads was to precede the transports and engage any opposing force while the landing was effected, which, it was calculated, could be easily accomplished in six hours. As the Army of Invasion was computed at from 150,000 to 200,000 men, the allotted time seemed short to those who had witnessed the landing of the French and English army in the Crimea, which occupied two days, although the army did not exceed 55,000 men, and the landing was unopposed. But the great Strategist had pronounced six hours sufficient, and the great Strategist could not possibly have miscalculated such a problem.

In point of fact, our Government were opportunely advised that the invasion was seriously meditated, and that they must be simultaneously on their guard against an American squadron which was to co-operate in a Fenian insurrection of Ireland. The bulk of the English Navy was, as usual, scattered abroad, but the Channel Fleet, complete in number and equipment, was in the Downs, and a number of gunboats and other vessels had been equipped and put to sea under orders similar to those issued by Nelson when Napoleon was meditating an invasion from Boulogne.

"Do not throw away your lives uselessly; retreat towards your own shores before an overwhelming force; but if the enemy attempt to land, dash among them at all hazards, and fight on till you sink them or are sunk."

It was on the evening of the 17th of June, 1874, that the Admiralty received intelligence that an American squadron had been sighted off Milford Haven on its way to the Irish Sea, and my Lords immediately telegraphed to the Commander of the Channel Fleet, Admiral Sir Henry Keppel, to be on the look out. Three hours afterwards arrived the news that the Armada had been detected, and subsequent reports coming in rapidly left no doubt that the Suffolk coast had been chosen for the landing. The very locality might be inferred with tolerable certainty from its almost exclusive adaptation to the purpose, and from the ascertained fact that foreign officers disguised as artists had been seen sketching it. We also, with all our talk about English practices, had not desisted to employ spies. Foucault certainly sent the Duke of Wellington Napoleon's plan of the Waterloo campaign, though it came too late; and it was shrewdly suspected, from the unusual foresight shown by the English Government, that there was a Fouché in the military Cabinet of the League.

So soon as the course of the headmost ships left no doubt of the precise destination of the expedition, the telegraphs were set to work, and all the available troops were brought down without delay. His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief was present in person, but the detailed arrangements were left to Lord Strathairn and Sandhurst assisted by General Wolsey and a well-appointed Staff. A couple of hours sufficed to dig in the sand such rifle pits and trenches as were still wanting; and these were manned with the Guards, the Rifles, a battalion of Marines, and the Inns of Court Volunteers. The rocky and uneven ground behind the beach was occupied by a strong body of Volunteers, under the direction of Lord Eloba, whose dispositions were an improvement on those of Roderick Dhu.

"Down sank the disappearing band,
"Each warrior vanished where he stood,
"In broom or bracken, heath or wood."

Taking advantage of every inequality of the ground, he placed his men so as to be within easy range of the boats when they should near the shore, and under shelter from the covering fire of the ships. A brigade, consisting of three regiments of the Line, the Sherwood Rangers, and two batteries of horse artillery, was kept in reserve under Sir Richard Airey. The rest of the artillery, with the exception of one masked battery, was placed on a mound or eminence commanding a large portion of the beach, and the cavalry, including the Blues and the 2nd Life Guards, under Lieutenant-General Sir James Scarlett, were placed behind the heights on the extreme left, where they could easily reach the shore. In the contingency of the enemy effecting a landing in force, the cavalry were to charge along the beach, and roll them up before they had time to form. With them, at the head of his Hussar regiment, was the Heir Apparent to the Throne, irresistibly impelled by the hereditary courage of his race to disobey a Royal order (issued from Balmoral) not to leave the capital. Torpedoes were laid down by a flotilla of gunboats under Rear Admiral Sherard Osborn, which withdrew when this duty was performed, prepared to operate on the flank of the Armada when the landing should commence.

It was a time of agonizing suspense to the bravest while the ships of war were taking up their positions to cover the landing, and the transports were transferring the armed cargoes to the boats. After ascertaining by careful sounding that they could approach no nearer, they opened their fire at about the distance of a mile. The rocks were shelled, and the strand was swept with round shot, causing little or no loss to the English, who never showed a finger above ridge pit or trench, till the landing boats intervened and the iron hail necessarily ceased. Then a signal gun was heard—the battery in the coat of their position was unmasked—shells and plunging shot from the mound fell thick and fast among the boats—a line of fire ran along the beach—the rocks and heights were all in a blaze with musketry. The effect was withering when volley after volley by practised marksmen, each taking individual aim, poured into boats crowded with men whose orders were to land and rush to close quarters without returning a shot. And gallantly did they struggle to carry out the programme. Half of one boat's crew and a third of another, some 150 men at the most, did actually reach dry land and make a rush at the trench held by the Guards, who shot down most of them as they approached, then sprang up and drove the remainder back into the water with the bayonet. Here occurred one of those incidents which show that modern warfare, with all its mechanical contrivances for wholesale and cold-blooded butchery, still affords scope for chivalry and romance. An officer of distinguished mien, the son of a princely house, was pushed to the water's edge, overpowered and exhausted, although fighting desperately, when his situation was seen by a young lieutenant of the invading navy from a ship's launch in which he had been carrying orders. Without a moment's hesitation he commanded the crew to pull back, and they obeyed with such a will that within a few seconds the boat was run aground not many yards from their gallant countryman, and they were springing to the rescue, when a ball struck the lieutenant, and he fell. He sacrificed his life to his chivalry, and not a man of the heroic boat's crew got away.

Among the many casualties which added to the confusion a shell exploded in the boat which carried the leader of the headmost division and his Staff, killing or wounding most of them, and two transports, carrying artillery ran upon torpedoes and were blown up. Things began to look very unlike Kinderspiel. But large sacrifices had been counted on—it was known and felt that a first landing on the British coast must be effected in the spirit of a forlorn hope, and fresh boats were hurrying in or loading from the transports; when, hark! a low rumbling sound, like intermitting thunder, is heard from far off, across the sea. It is the sound of cannon on the extreme left of the Armada! It can be nothing but the English Channel Fleet. A fast steamer had in fact overtaken the Admiral, and, despatching two of his ships to watch the Americans, he had come back (like Desaix at Marengo) to give a decisive turn to the wavering fortunes of the day—the day big with the fate of England, of Europe, of the world! He brought with him seven first-class ironclads, with more than twice as many others of heavy metal, and it was a grand and fearful spectacle, the approach of those magnificent machines, instinct with life and motion, cleaving their way right onward through the thick of the hostile armament without stopping to engage the ships of war, and running down transport after transport; while almost every shot from their enormous guns sent a ship to the bottom, or left a boatload of gallant men struggling for life in the waves. If such a fate is appalling to think of or contemplate at a safe distance, what must it have been to those who saw and felt that their own turn was coming—who watched with fixed and fascinated gaze the rush of the iron monster that was about to pass crashing over them?

The military organization of the invading army was beyond all praise. An order emanating from headquarters might be said to live along the line, and the skill to restore a losing battle or effect a retreat was never wanting, any more than the strategy which wins or improves a victory. But what did such skill avail here, on an untried element, where soldiers and generals were equally useless and bravery thrown away? All hope of carrying out any pre-organized plan was at an end. Save qui peut became the word among the hired or pressed masters of transports, who, such of them as escaped being run down, made off without waiting to take in their original freights. The wind arose and soon freshened to a gale. The gunboats which had fallen back before the advanced armament now assailed it on every side. The fire of shells was continued through the night. When morning broke the catastrophe was made clear in all its horrors. The second Armada had shared the fate of the first. Most of the hostile iron-clads were missing. That which carried Cesar and his fortunes—in other words, the Admiral-Generalissimo and his suite—had received a six-hundred-pound steel-headed shot between wind and water, and had no alternative but to strike. Princes, Archdukes, and Dukes were made prisoners by the score. The renowned Chief of a brilliant Staff was picked up in an exhausted state while endeavoring to regain his ship by swimming, after the boat in which he was trying to remedy the confusion had been swamped by the surge; and his Serene Highness, who had made his way to the shore at the head of his contingent, was with difficulty persuaded to give up his sword to Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, who enacted the part of Bayard to Francis I. at Pavia. But we reserve for another chapter the various episodes of this ever-memorable triumph and its results.

Puseyism vs. The Queen.

The High Church party in England have undertaken to lecture the Queen because of her Low Church leanings. They were furious a few months ago about the Royal marriage, and said it was simply outrageous that such a ceremony should be performed in Lent. They are now horrified to hear that Her Majesty has so far forgotten her Christianity as to enter a Scotch "synagogue" during the "great feast of Pentecost." Her Majesty, and her subjects the world over, have reason to rejoice that her actions are not pleasing to the Puseyites. The fact that the latter are most abusive in their language says but little for their Christianity. Here is a specimen, from a High Church organ. After referring to the Royal marriage, the writer says:—"A much graver offence is the Queen's retreat to Scotland at this season, and her residence there on the great feast of Pentecost. The newspapers report her presence on that day in the synagogue of the parish, and that Principal Tullock was summoned from his duties in the General Assembly to entertain Her Majesty with his oratory. To forsake Christian England for Calvinistic Scotland, which has as a nation repudiated the command of God and abolished the commemoration of the gift of the Holy Spirit, is significant of want of confidence in Him who alone can give true comfort to the afflicted. It is further remarkable that the Queen has for several years successively designedly gone to Scotland at this season as if to escape from the services of Pentecost. Has Her Majesty no spiritual advisers among the right reverend fathers of the Church? or are they so occupied with their feud with restlessness and positions and such like very important matters that they deem it inconsistent with their evangelical principles to teach the Head of the Church to obey God and keep his commandments?"

MYSTERIOUS MURDER. The London Spectator says:—"The inquiry into the death of Mr. Frederick Graves Moon, son of Alderman Sir Francis Moon, which took place under strange and suspicious circumstances at 23 Newton Road, Bayswater, on the 24th May, has been one of the English interests of the week, and in conjunction with the great Tichborne case, which still draws its slow length along, has to some extent divided the attention of society with the terrible scenes enacted in Paris. The deceased came to his end by a wound in the side which he received while sitting in the dining-room of the Newton Road house, with a Mr. F. Moon, a Miss Newington, the wife of a solicitor of the name of Newington, from whom she has long been separated and of late generally styled Mrs. Davy. It appears that Captain Davy and Mr. Moon had both a liaison with this woman, and both visited her at this house, of which Captain Davy was a tenant. Mrs. Davy or Newington is charged with the crime of murdering him—the coroner's inquest having found a verdict of wilful murder against her, and she is still in prison under remand, though not committed for trial. It appears from the evidence that Mrs. Davy had been ill for some time, and under medical care for a derangement of the nervous system due to excess in drinking; that she had been considering the death of her husband for a few days; that she was to have left for Homburg with Mr. Moon's sanction, on the day after his death occurred; and that by her own account, there was an after-dinner quarrel between her and Mr. Moon due to some expression of his concerning her daughter, which resulted in a scuffle, in the course of which she took up a small knife which, whether by her intention or not indicated the wound resulting in his death within a few minutes. Mrs. Newington own account of the matter was, "I am afraid it is I who have done it. I really think I did, but I don't know how." She stated that she jumped up with a knife in her hand, that she struggled and fell, and that she saw the blood pouring out, but could not tell how it came. The medical evidence goes to show that the deceased might possibly have fallen on the knife and so met his death but that is not very probable. The most serious evidence against Mrs. Newington is that of Captain Elliot and Mr. Pickford, both of whom testified to her having more than once threatened to stab Mr. Moon, and the former that on one occasion, and in doing so the statement of Mr. Moon himself she had actually stabbed him through the coat.
